

Artificial Relationships

Artists can communicate with paints
In defiance of dimensional constraints.
They use colors as expressions
of their personal impressions,
To immortalize their comments and complaints.

Writers paint their images with words.
It's the way they get around the rule of thirds.
They express their own opinions to a multitude of minions,
Though sometimes the stuff they write is for the birds.

Poets fit their feelings into forms.
Rhyme and meter are the classic poet's norms.
Cadence and alliteration help poetic compilation
Weather all the critics' desultory storms.

Music changes poetry to song.
If the poets do the ding, composers dong.
Music is the magic potion for vicarious emotion
To be shared in sync with all who come along.

Bud Morris

5/20/2013

www.BudMorris.net

Background: My daughter's artist's palate